Summary: All individuals may interpret scientific theories like Loquate in a way that aligns with their atheistic, agnostic, or religious or spiritual beliefs. Loquate emphasizes the fundamental unity underlying diversity.

As I follow Natural Law, there are times when a cross is put on my shoulders. By cross I mean something I would not ask for myself but which once the new direction is experienced brings joy to me.

When my innate needs are thwarted such as the Israelites were thwarted for over 400 years enslaved by Pharaoh until led out of Egypt by Moses, largely their innate need for autonomy was thwarted. Yet their culture served a purpose. It supported the beliefs of those who held their culture to be true.

Opposition hones personal culture. Every person has been an Israelite even today. For no person ever has smooth sailing throughout their life. There can be but two outcomes. Your personal culture will move towards ardor of heart, a deep profound love of all around you, or toward ego worship.

The good become better and the bad become worse. It all depends on who you trust. At times when I experience my cross I pray to a caring presence outside of myself in surrender and get Miracles.

The first chart below without faith establishes our motivation to be competent. The second chart below establishes our back door to faith on the lower half. Each chart has its place and purpose.

The difference is this. In the second chart, prayer is needed. We face our cross. If I help satisfy the innate needs of others, even when they thwart my innate needs, the caring presence will deliver me. I will have peace and joy.

The time is now. All on earth face this same dilemma. Will we turn to the caring presence that resides outside of our self, to God by whatever name we give Him and still love the one who thwarts our innate needs? Loquate emphasizes the fundamental unity underlying diversity. One aspect of Loquate pertains to the interconnectedness of individuals within society. It underscores the notion that each person is an integral part of a larger community, and their actions ripple through the collective consciousness, influencing others in ways both seen and unseen. This interconnectedness fosters a sense of responsibility and empathy, encouraging individuals to consider the broader implications of their choices and behaviors.

Loquate provides research based, empowering structures. Over 250 video Testimonies and Podcasts from ordinary people like you and I are an empowering structure when taken as a whole. Many testimonies relate to the back door to faith on the lower half of the second chart. Their faith attribute may be found in videos tagged "Experience of God."

Without being ethnocentric, viewers may enjoy being at the cutting edge where work meets faith. The relevance is found in stories of loving authentically in one's work, and having charity, or ardor of heart, towards others in the truth of one's work. Every person has a gift or talent innately planted in their heart and mind. Faith grows when God bestows extreme value for the common good through such a one's gift or talent. Unlike a gift or talent used solely to benefit one's self, God's gift is always outwardly directed for the common good. Our task at Loquate.tv is to increase awareness of the gift and God's preciousness, so God does not go unnoticed, unmarked, without God's proper honor.

Tragedies occur in every faith community. Many times those with faith wish to share the outcome of their tragedy as extreme value for the common good. Whether unwittingly almost like a passenger through the tragedy, or purposefully, they share the common good that occurs through their gift or talent. And strikingly through the tragedy raise the awareness of the gift and God's preciousness, so God does not go unnoticed, unmarked, without God's proper honor. For example, see Swoboda, Madl, and Lederer.

A parish priest who knew me very well said I was like Moses. Perhaps he meant that Moses was exposed to Egyptian culture, high priest Midian culture, and Jewish culture. I was exposed to Native American culture, Catholic culture, and Franciscan community. Actually everyone is on Moses' journey. Like Moses at Loquate.tv podcasts marked Miracles First Hand are a research based empowering structure when taken as a whole.

When Joining Loquate's Journey at Loquate.tv, safety matters. Group freedom to live our deepest beliefs in harmony with all by changing our self and no one else is an empowering purposeful structure to go at your own pace. For the lower half of the second chart below takes time. A Smart® group permits everyone to go at their own pace. Its prospective member checklist is another empowering structure verifiably scientific by feedback with a 98% success rate. The Smart® group's research based empowering structure is the checklist and feedback taken as a whole.

Loquate its promotion and exposition

Smart® habits converge as Smart® Natural Law. We become small and the caring presence becomes big. Like a vein of gold within, Smart® habits validate and predict scientifically wellbeing by changing yourself and no one else. Like a trade school, Smart® small groups meet 9 x per year for 2 hours by zoom at a regular time monthly, such as the 3rd Tuesday at 10 am, but not in July, August, or December. There is no cost except an initial commitment fee by a prospective member not exceeding $200. Loquate's work is eleemosynary. Loquate is member supported in unity for all.
